

THE UNIVERSITY OF HONG KONG
LI KA SHING FACULTY OF MEDICINE

Master of Public Health (MPH)
Programme Learning Outcomes (PLOs)

University Taught Postgraduate (TpG) Educational Aims (EA)		Master of Public Health (MPH) Mapping Programme Level Learning Outcomes (PLO) to TPG
TPG1	Critical intellectual enquiry and acquiring up-to-date knowledge and research skills in a discipline / profession	PLO1	Plan, identify, collect, retrieve, analyse and synthesise relevant and appropriate sources of information, including community assets and resources related to public health
TPG2	Application of knowledge and research skills to practice or theoretical exploration, demonstrating originality and creativity	PLO2	Apply generic evidence based public health skills (using expertise, knowledge and research capability in epidemiology, biostatistics, environmental health sciences, management, social and behavioural sciences) to modern public health practice in individual patient and population settings
TPG3	Tackling novel situations and ill-defined problems	PLO3	Define the major local and global public health challenges and using the appropriate tools and methods for health policy analysis and programme evaluation suggest optimisation of public health services and programmes
TPG4	Collaboration and communication of disciplinary knowledge to specialists and the general public	PLO4	Adopt reliable and consistent inter- and intra-professional communication and leadership skills with peers, colleagues and patients and engage in local and global health issues as a professional responsibility
TPG5	Awareness of and adherence to personal and professional ethics	PLO5	Assess the ethical, psychological and subjective health, socio-economic and legal impact of personal- and policy- level professional decisions on individuals, populations and society
TPG6	Enhancement of leadership and advocacy skills in the profession	PLO6	Describe the major public health players (agencies, institutions and governments) and political actors influencing public health, health policy, law and regulation, and acquire and practice leadership and management skills in the care of both individual patients and groups